Southern tourism operators discussing their future

Tourism operators are today Discussing Tourism in Queenstown at the third of the 2019 series of regional forums organised by Tourism Industry Aotearoa.

TIA is taking the one-day Discussing Tourism events to three other locations around the country this year. The series started last week in Tauranga and Auckland, and continues on Wednesday in Christchurch.

“The annual series of regional events provides an important forum to discuss the issues, challenges and opportunities facing tourism businesses, and connects local businesses with industry leaders,” says TIA Chief Executive Chris Roberts.

“Our industry has now entered a new phase where the growth will be less spectacular than the past five years. What can we expect and how do we better plan, fund and manage sustainable growth and ensure tourism enhances Aotearoa for future generations?”

The programme includes presentations on innovation, and how uncovering a business’ purpose will assist in delivering customer value. Attendees will also find out how measuring their carbon footprint is the first step to a meaningful and effective reduction plan, and hear from GO Rentals on the steps they’ve taken to make a difference.

With local government elections taking place in October, operators will also be encouraged to take the opportunity to raise awareness among Mayors, Councillors, election candidates, council officers and communities of the value of hosting international and domestic visitors.

TIA’s new Local government elections 2019 – A toolkit for tourism operators includes the top industry priorities for Councils to address, and tips on how to get involved with local councils, along with tourism facts and figures.

The document shows that visitors to Queenstown Lakes District Council’s area spent an estimated $2.95 billion in the year to May 2019. That comprised $1.1 billion spent by domestic visitors and $1.85 billion from international visitors.

“Tourism contributes to the economic and social vitality of every region in New Zealand. As an industry, we want to work collaboratively with local government to develop the visitor economy and ensure growth is being managed in a sustainable way,” Mr Roberts says.
